Never is it mentioned that this is a "how to" do it in Ireland.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Solid readBy Bryan HessThis book raises a great deal of information and items to think of when initiating a new business in small markets. I would very much like to see a similar book for the US. Many references provided for training, certification and assistance are related only to Ireland. This is not a knock against the book merely an observation. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Three Stars By Customer ellnbchristi. Not great. Not horrible either.

Have you ever thought about trying to earn some money from producing food? Are you the person everyone goes to for their lemon meringue pies, apple tarts and other desserts for family occasions, christenings or other events? Do you have a garden of rhubarb or other fruit? Do you make jam every year and give it away when you could be selling it? Do you fancy the idea of making cheese or yogurt or ice cream but don't know where to start? If so, then this is the book for you - it will tell you everything you need to know or show you where to find it for yourself. Money for Jam contains everything that someone who is new to the food business will need to get started and to keep going. It will help bakers, jam and honey-makers, ice cream, yogurt and cheese-makers, egg producers, sausage roll, pie and pastry-bakers, chocolatiers, and dessert-makers. It covers the what, where, who and how for small food producers - including legislation and registration, labelling and packaging, suppliers and distributors - in an easy-to-read and easy-to-follow format.

About the Author Oonagh Monahan has over 14 years' experience of the food industry, working with small producers in particular for over 10 years, helping them to start up and grow their businesses. She has worked with producers of every variety of food: everything from fudge, sausages and bread to beer and cream liquors. As one of her clients said, she is like a big sister - the person you turn to when you need advice, help and encouragement!
